Dawson Gives Columbia Men Drill in Signals

Coach Puts on Uniform for First Time—Opening Game To-day

Fred Dawson, head coach of the Columbia football team, put on a uniform himself yesterday afternoon, for the first time and inspired his men in an unusual display of snap considering the few work-outs they have had. It was hot, too, but that made no difference to Fred and apparently his charges were just as unconcerned.

The hard scrimmage of the previous day had left many sore spots, so the coach decided to limber up his men by a protracted signal drill. One of the youngsters who is taking his first shot at football asked permission to leave his shoulder pads off, in as much as there was to be no scrimmage.

"Nay, Nay," said Dawson. "You'll have to carry that excess baggage in a game and you had better get accustomed to the load. Furthermore you may accidentally get a hard bump or, even if it is only signal practice, I have known such things to happen."

As it turned out this same recruit was stood in his head in a couple of times before the drill ended.

This was the first attempt Dawson has made to run off any plays, and it was to be expected that considerable confusion would result. After about an hour's labor, however, the squad was going through the various formations in fairly good shape.

The men who took part in the signal work and who, from present indications, will form the nucleus of the varsity were Shaw, Hines, Tomberg, Robinson, Green, Madorelli, Parks, Forster, Houlihan, Mammotti, and Zychlin. Brin, the former N. Y. star, was not on the field because of some special military obligation. The squad as a whole was much smaller in number than heretofore for the same reason.

The first game of the season will be played this afternoon. According to Dawson, the teams will be organized with reference to battalions, and there will be no line-up of eleven which might be termed varsity and scrub.

The contest will start at 4:30. It is the aim of the coach to get each battalion interested in the progress of its particular team, and he hopes to have a goodly band of rooters on hand to cheer them on.

Major Herbert C. Barnhart, who is now in full command of the post, has agreed to attend the "opening ceremonies" on the gridiron.

Flushing's Game With Morris Called Off

Three cases of Spanish influenza on the Flushing High School football eleven have forced the cancellation of its game with Morris High School, which was scheduled for Clason Point, Westchester, on Saturday. The occasion was to be a big one to Flushing students, as they were to make the journey to the grounds in a special bus.

The players who are ill are Burton, the back; Willard, the end, and Mabel, the tackle. To add to the trouble, Smith, the crack fullback, is ineligible through backwash in his studies. However, there are several games that merit attention. De Witt Clinton meets its ancient rival, Dickinson High School, at Jersey City. The other games on the card are Erasmus Hall vs. St. John's Prep, at St. John's, and Brooklyn Prep vs. Adelphi Academy, at Adelphi.

Facts and Fancies

By LOUIS LEE ARMS

(Copyright, 1918, New York Tribune Inc.)
As Patrick Henry, the early Virginia columnist, said: "Give me contributors or give me death!"

A Word or Two From Mr. Maney

IF THE unfledged admirals of Annapolis and the cushioned array from Penn State chance to meet on the chalked and bleacher-bordered rectangle this fall—as press reports indicate they will—the clash will mark the resumption of a feud that for years has been waged, tooth and nail, up and down the fur-fringed slopes of the Pacific; it will give Paris another chance to seek out the vulnerable blur in the well-lit invincible armor of Achilles; it will give Hugo Bezdek yet another opportunity to present to Gilmour Dobie that he would like to present to him.

Let us consider this man Dobie, who so ably directs the football manoeuvres of the midshipmen. Let us also consider Bezdek, who is a Pirate in July and a pigskin pilot in October.

Gilmour Dobie came to Seattle and the University of Washington in 1908. He remained until the season of 1916 had drawn to a victorious close, and in that long interval—a span which bridged more than two college generations—Washington never sipped the vinegar of defeat. During that nine-year cadenza by the Scotch soloist the college teams of the Pacific were not grouped and groomed with the primary idea of being crowned the monarch of their sector on Thanksgiving Day; they were fashioned first and last to beat Dobie. A victory over that angular person could erase the stigma of a score of defeats by less illustrious rivals. Coaches came from far and near to match their wits with the Washington wizard, but to no avail. A puzzling forward pass, a sharp dash off tackle, and the work of six months was scrapped forever.

Prominent among those who futilely strove to overthrow the Dobie dynasty was one Hugo Bezdek, football instructor at the University of Oregon much of the time that Dobie flourished in Seattle. Bezdek came to Oregon alive with the cool craft and strategy of Alonzo Stagg. He was blessed with stalwart material. He was given carte blanche by an ever hoping and not too exacting faculty. Hugo was looked upon as the current Moses, yet he was flattened by Dobie on many a rain-spattered field. Do not think that Bezdek's term at Oregon was without glory. Far from that! He turned out some mighty teams—indeed, he crushed a Pennsylvania eleven featuring Howard Berry—but the Dobie machines were quite beyond the Bezdek comprehension. Hugo is made of pretty stern stuff, notwithstanding, and he will doubtless welcome another chance on a field far removed from his former deflections.

When Dobie's navy team was stopped by West Virginia in an early season game in 1917 the angular Scot suffered his first and only reverse in his career as a college football coach, and it is a career that has endured ever since he played quarter for Doc Williams at Minnesota, some fifteen years ago. At a conservative estimate Dobie's several charges have met the enemy in some eighty entanglements and only once did they fail to get through the barbed wire.

Gloomy, taciturn, pessimistic, cheerless as a cold flat, Dobie is a disciplinarian second to none. Though his conversation is limited, it is charged with dynamite, and what he can say to an erring team between halves justifies the lavish imagination of the more flighty writers of football fiction. His general style of architecture conforms closely to that of the lath, and his rain-coated, derby-topped frame is as famous and as familiar in the Far West as those of his historic predecessors, Lewis and Clarke. Dobie's system of coaching involves a minimum of plays developed to perfection. He says that many of his championship teams had no more than twelve plays in their entire repertoire. Bezdek can testify that on many occasions this seemed about ten more than necessary.

RICHARD MANEY.

Lyrics by Mr. Crespinel

THERE'S a color that is yellow running down the Kaiser's back,
And though it isn't plain to see it from the front,
His flesh is getting goosey, for the YANKS are on his track,
And St. Michael is their opening little stunt.

Yes, the YANKS are cutting capers, though there's nothing strange in that,
For they're a way of doing things that's quite their own,
And the way the way is going, why, our BOYS will soon be back,
If we all subscribe our UTMOST to the LOAN.

W. T. CRESPINEL.

Suggested by Mr. Walker

FRED M. WALKER, former University of Chicago football star, last season coach at Williams and at present the athletic director and coach at the Newport Naval Training Station, is trying, so far without success, to arrange a game between his eleven and that representing the Great Lakes Naval Training Station in Chicago. This is said to be the strongest team in the West.

"They can't see it our way," he writes this column. "I figure they ought to come through with this game either at the Yale Bowl, Harvard Stadium or the Polo Grounds. If necessary we'll go to Chicago."

"As yet we have been discouraged from playing games in which there is charged a gate admission; yet I understand other service teams are doing that, notably the Great Lakes Training Station team, which could have played Syracuse for a game that would have netted many dollars, which could have been turned over to Big Bill Edwards's fund for football suits for our soldiers and sailors abroad. I wish this thing could be gone into and that Edwards would do something toward sponsoring such a contest."

Berquist First In Naval Games At Bensonhurst

Tom Hanrahan Wins Weight Event in Sailors' Athletic Contests

Edward Berquist, at one time the star all-round athlete of the Bronx Church House, earned the individual honors in the field day games of Naval Base No. 6, held on its grounds in Bensonhurst, yesterday. Berquist has lost none of his agility, as is shown by his winning the 50-yard dash and the running broad jump.

Another former local athlete to return to his old love was Tom Hanrahan, erstwhile Irish-American Athletic Club weight thrower. He won the twelve-pound shot event as he pleased with 41 feet 10 inches. A dead heat between C. Sherer, 8th Division, and E. Casler, 2d Division, featured the greased pole climbing race. The jockies showed their patriotism by subscribing $80,000 to the Fourth Liberty Loan.

The summary follows:
Putting 15-pound shot—Won by Tom Hanrahan, 8th Division, with 41 feet 10 inches. Second, C. R. Wadley, 12th Division, with 37 feet 3 inches. Third, Greased pole climbing—Dead heat between C.
